Test automation tool for the computing unit of the recurrent operational level

Abstract

The paper represents common problems connected with testing of the recurrent digital signal processor as well as special issues of the the computing device testing. The designed test automation tool for computing unit of the recurrent operational level is described. Advantages of this approach are presented.